IMPOSSIBLE?

READ THIS LETTER

MANAGEMENT, PALACE THEATRE,

Dear Sir,

Having heard that the authorities of the Claybury Asylum did not have any restraint in which to test your man HOUDINI, allow me to inform you that I can make the regulation full length restraint waist coat out of canvas and leather fastenings, which has been abolished owing to the cruel method in which it holds the patient, and if you will allow me to strap HOUDINI into one of my own manufacture I feel certain that it is impossible for him to release himself.

Kindly let me know if he is willing to make the attempt, so that I can start and make one at once. Naturally he must make the effort in full view of the audience. Awaiting your reply.

I beg to remain,

T. GREENWOOD.

HOUDINI

NEVER REFUSES A CHALLENGE

however great the risk of failure.

THIS IS AN ENORMOUS TASK

and one that will tax to the utmost the ingenuity and resourcefulness of

but he cheerfully accepts the challenge, and will make the attempt (which is probably the greatest thing he has ever undertaken) on

FRIDAY NIGHT, JAN. 8, 1909

(Second House).

HOUDINI'S World-wide reputation is at Stake.

ESCAPE DEVICES & MAGIC PROPS

39. Houdini's Double Fold Death Defying Water Mystery.

American, ca. 1909. A heavy and imposing wooden crate with trapezoidal lid. Four heavy locks incorporated into the lid lock it securely to the box, along with hasps for four additional padlocks.

In performance, a large metal milk can was lowered into the box and filled with water. The performer stepped into the water-filled can, and its lid was locked securely in place. To further secure the escape artist, assistants next locked the lid of the wooden crate in place. A cloth cabinet was then drawn around the apparatus. Minutes later – long after every spectator in the crowd had run out of breath and patience – the cabinet's front curtain was pulled aside, and there stood the magician, dripping with water and perspiration, having made his escape.

Houdini devised the device offered here after his Milk Can escape, introduced in 1908, gained enough popularity to be copied by other escape artists trading on the "Elusive American's" fame and reputation. Its method of operation, a cleverly concealed internal mechanism, is likely the forerunner of other more famous escapes Houdini would use with great success later in his career.

The box is pictured in a color stone lithograph promoting the feat, and appears in Milbourne Christopher's book, Houdini: A Pictorial Life (1976), at page 54. In the latter image, Houdini's brother, Hardeen, is shown performing the routine. The photograph clearly identifies the escape device offered here as being identical to that which Hardeen is pictured in, down to the knots in the wooden walls of the crate. A ring in the bottom of the box (22 ¾" in diameter) shows clearly where the Milk Can was set during performances. Outer dimensions of the box measure 29 ¼ x 29 ¼ x 38 ½".

Upon Houdini's death, most of his magic apparatus and escape devices were bequeathed to his brother, who spent the next 18 years gifting and selling the material to various magicians and collectors. The person who purchased as much if not more of this material from Hardeen than anyone was a young man from Holyoke, Massachusetts named Sidney Radner. A copy of Hardeen's advertising brochure which features the Double Fold Death Defying Water Mystery is inscribed to Radner as follows: "This is the box escape. How would you like to do it? Not another in the world. H." See illustration at left.

A copy of a letter of provenance from Jack Lawain of Monmouth, Illinois, a well-known dealer in collectible and used magic props and ephemera, is included with the crate. It describes in great detail the device's provenance and trail of ownership, from Houdini to Hardeen to Lawain, to its most recent owner. In all likelihood, the prop was built to Houdini's specifications by his trusted assistant, Jim Collins.

A letter of provenance signed by Sidney Radner, Honorary Curator of the Houdini Historical Center, states, "In 1905, while playing the Alhambra Theater in Paris[,] the keeper of the Bastille relics challenged Houdini to get out of these thumb cuffs. If he could escape in plain view of the audience the keeper would give the thumkin to him. He did - thus the thumkin became part of the Houdini collection. This torture device was used on prisoners during the revolution. After being secured by this device a rope was passed under the hands, tossed over a large tree limb, so the prisoner could be pulled up and hung by the thumbs." 46. Houdini Large Letter Lock. Heavy metal combination lock with a variety of letters engraved on its sides and front. Houdini's brother, Hardeen, writes in the accompanying letter of provenance, "The large Letter lock that I sent you, was brought to Houdini while he was working at the Alhambra Theatre Paris France in the year 1905. I think it is a German lock. The lock was NOT brought on the stage but thrown on the stage from the front of the house with the command to 'open that if you can'. Houdini looked at it, made a speech to the audience, saying that it would take him to[o] long to open the lock during his performance, but if the Gentleman would wait until after the show, he could try and open it in his dressing room. This was agreed to, and after the act, the man waited outside of the dressing room for over an hour. The truth is Houdini opened the cuff or lock in about fifteen minutes, but for spite made the man wait an hour. He kept the lock. And I do not think the lock has been opened since, as I have forgotten the combination. Yours Truly, Hardeen." The original TLS dated Oct. 14, 1937 has been framed in a shadowbox along with the lock and a reproduction portrait of Houdini. 17 x 19 ¼". Rare.

7,000/9,000

A detailed photograph and description of the lock – including an amusing anecdote regarding a challenge in which Houdini used it to defeat one of his many imitators – appears in The Great Houdini Handcuffs and Legirons by Dick Wresch (Corberry Press, 1961).

50. Goldston, Will. TLS from Will Goldston to Harry Houdini. July 31, 1925. On his elaborate personal letterhead, Goldston writes a flattering letter to Houdini, stating, in part, "...the Rigoletto Bros. gave me a call and stated that they saw you work in New York and greatly admired the manner in which you presented your act. They say as a showman you stand supreme. When one considers that these words have come from two men you had some misunderstanding with some time ago it is most interesting. This information of course is in confidence." One 4to sheet, typed on two sides. With a later photograph of Goldston and Houdini, 10 x 8". Signed "WILL GOLDSTON."

51. Hardeen. Bean Giant Handcuff Escape routine, written by Hardeen. Circa 1939. A detailed holographic manuscript outlining the presentation of an escape from a pair of Bean Giant handcuffs, in the hand of Houdini's brother, Hardeen. The outline includes specific lines of patter ("With the assistance of one of the committee I'll give you a practical demonstration... Will you kindly step forward, please? You don't mind if I handcuff you?); as well as stage directions ("Place key between your teeth"). Written in ink on two sides of Hardeen's pictorial stationery. Splitting at old fold, worn at extremities; good.

52 (recto and verso)

52. Hardeen. Two page TLS regarding handcuffs and escapes. Dated May 8, 1942, Hardeen writes to A. Nugent of Richmond, Virginia regarding a variety of restraints he is sending Nugent, including the Spanish Thumb Cuff, Egyptian Leg Iron, Oregon Boot and Shoe, Rankin "fixed" cuff, the Bean Giant "fixed" ("... once I place any of these cuffs on any one ---- THEY WONT [sic] GET OUT."), and more. The letter also describes methods of escape from several of these manacles. Mounted to two sides of a single sheet; extremities worn. Signed "HARDEEN."

53. Hardeen. Important archive of 64 letters from Theo Hardeen to Sidney Radner. Spanning 1936 – 1945, and covering a wide range of topics, most importantly the various props, escape devices, handcuffs, locks, and Houdiniana Radner purchased from Hardeen. Hardeen explains the working of various articles, and also describes many of the escape devices and handcuffs sold to Radner over the course of their relationship. These included many of Houdini's most famous escapes: The Water Torture Cell (in the correspondence, Hardeen refers to it repeatedly as the "U.S.D." – short for "Upside Down," as both he and Houdini called it), and the Mail Bag, as well as a handcuff cabinet, the Iron Man (the Iron Maiden escape), and various pieces of Houdini memorabilia and photos, leg irons, keys, lockpicks, handcuffs. In one letter, Hardeen offers to sell Robert-Houdini's trapeze automaton, Antonio Diavolo (referred to incorrectly as "Pyshio").

Many of Hardeen's notes are tantalizing: "...I am sending you a three sheet litho of the Chinese Water Torture Cell..." In one letter, Hardeen alludes to the fact that the "trap and irons" for Houdini's famous illusion of Walking Through a Brick Wall will probably have to be thrown away, as that portion of the apparatus is simply too big and bulky to ship. In another he writes, "I saw Houdini's Milk Can today and it is a beaut."

Several letters specifically list items Hardeen is selling to Radner, with asking prices (two punishment suits and two straitjackets for $25.00, for example). Others include Hardeen's take on current affairs, including the biography of Houdini by Harold Kellock ("This book is full of lies, and I am writing a book with a lot of "quotes" and correcting them.").

Letters are written on a variety of Hardeen's letterheads, most being 4to sheets, and most accompanied by original mailing covers, hand addressed by Hardeen to Radner. Length varies from short notes to three pages. Several holographic letters on hotel stationery, written en route, are part of the archive. In the first letter, dating to 1936, Hardeen addresses Radner quite formally. In the last letter in the archive, Elsie Hardeen writes to Radner as a close friend, just after her husband's death, in a familiar and friendly tone. Most letters are signed with Hardeen's nickname "Dash," which was given to him by his mother, as is explained in one of the letters.

A remarkable and significant archive, and essential to the understanding of Houdini, his brother, and the lasting fame of the Houdini name.

The last third of the scrapbook includes a quantity of contemporary newsclippings and advertisements related to Houdini and his brother Hardeen, as well as four Hardeen handbills. Folio. Some contents loose; generally good condition.

56. Houdini, Beatrice. One-page TLS from Bess Houdini to F.E. Powell. Dated Jan. 17, 1927, she writes, in part, "My health is still so that I have my good and bad days. ... You know Hardeen inherited all of Houdini's show, but in my possession I have a rare old box, no doubt of the [Robert-] Houdin period, of a figure that arises with a selected card, coin and ring." On Houdini's engraved mourning stationery. Laid down and folded from mailing. SIGNED "BEATRICE HOUDINI."

Mrs. Houdini is likely referring to the Harlequin automaton popular with magicians such as Robert Heller in the Victorian era.

57

57. Houdini, Beatrice. One page ALS from Bess Houdini. Circa 1937. Mrs. Houdini writes, "Sorry to hear that Tommy Downs is ill...my health demands a month of desert life - so I'm off again..." likely to California, where she spent much of her later years. Old folds, scattered minor soiling. On headed notepaper bearing her portrait, signed "BEATRICE HOUDINI."

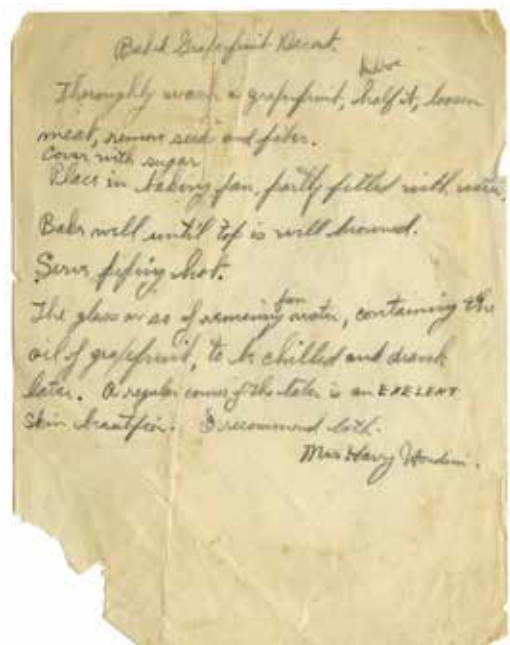

200/300

58. Houdini, Beatrice. Bess Houdini handwritten recipe. Mrs. Houdini's recipe for a "Baked Grapefruit Desert [sic]," "To be served piping hot." She also notes that the "oil of grapefruit... is an EXELEN [sic] skin beautifier." Boldly written in pencil on one 4to sheet, considerably worn and chipped. SIGNED "MRS. HARRY HOUDINI."

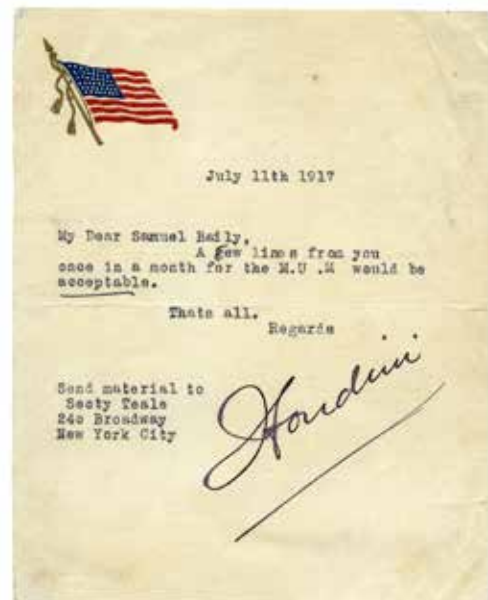

200/300

59. Houdini, Harry. Houdini TLS to Sam Bailey. July 11, 1917. Houdini writes to the noted Boston-based dealer in magic tricks and escape devices, asking for contributions to the SAM publication, M.U.M. On embossed patriotic notepaper. BOLDLY SIGNED "HOUDINI."

THE COLOGNE PAPERS

60. Houdini, Harry. Houdini's German Slander Trial Archive, known as "The Cologne Papers." Being a file of documents from the famous 1902 German court case in which Houdini successfully sued Cologne Patrolman Werner Graff and newspaper editor Johann Merfeld for slander. Graff alleged Houdini was not the "genius of escape" he claimed to be. Merfeld published the allegations. Houdini was vindicated in a court of law, and the judgement was upheld on appeal.

The most significant item in the archive is a folio containing a nearly 50-page-long handwritten transcript of the court proceedings, in German. This is bound in cloth with marbled endsheets, elaborately gilt stamped on the front board with old German text which roughly translates to "Public Apology! In the Name of the King against the policeman Werner Graf of the Cologne Police. Harry Houdini." No Houdini biographer to date has had access to this folio.

Many passages have been boldly underlined or marked in pencil, presumably by Houdini, who habitually made notations of this sort, and who would use scenes from the trial in his own publications in following years.

Also bound in is a handwritten notice in which the plaintiff is identified as "Weiss" as opposed to "Houdini"; and a short summation of the judgement, typed and signed on three legal-size sheets and signed by a German official. Tipped on to various blank leaves are scattered newspaper clippings in both German and English, and other official documents.

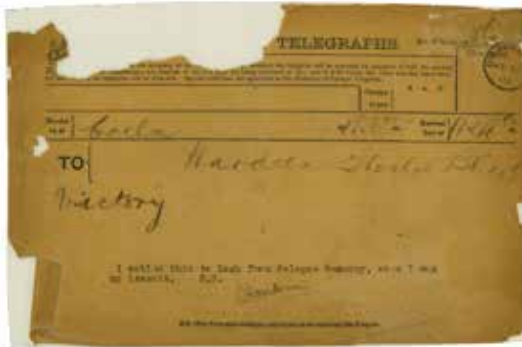

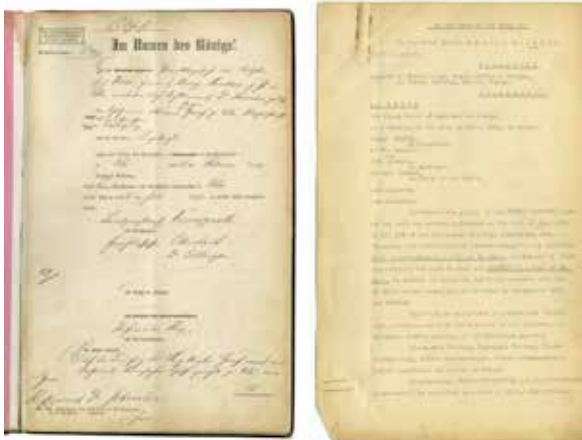

Two typescripts contemporary to the trial, one in German, the other its English translation are also included. These reproduce the handwritten account and detail the proceedings, which included escapes by Houdini from locks and chains, as well as a demonstration of how to escape handcuffs.

Three telegrams are part of the archive. The first, dated February 26, 1902, was sent to Hardeen by Houdini. The message is one word: "Victory." Below this is Houdini's typed note, "I cabled this to Dash from Cologne Germany, when I won my lawsuit. H.H. [Signed] Houdini." The telegram has been laminated. The second is a telegram of congratulations sent to Houdini by his friend James Bard. Houdini's typed note on the telegram states, "Wire from Jim Bard and Schelessing[r] when I won my law suite in Cologne. H.H." The third, in German, bears Houdini's typed note: "Wire received from Herr Dr. Althoff when I won my lawsuit... H.H. And this is written in 1914."

As biographers Kalush and Sloman explain, "Houdini's sweetest revenge came when the court ordered a public apology from the Kaiser be issued to Houdini...." This, then, is the most personal and lasting relic of that sweet revenge, and an important historic artifact of one of Houdini's first great publicity stunts; a unique and personal document from his early years and successes in Europe, as he rose to greater fame.

BOWED DOWN WITH GRIEF

61. Houdini, Harry. Houdini TL to Hardeen on mourning stationery, regarding their mother's death. New York, August 13, 1913. Houdini, with his characteristic misspellings, writes to his brother: "Hope you are finding work O.K. and that you are bearing our loss with fortitude. I hope that after I once get to work, that this terrible blow will be softened with time, but the more I grieve, the more I know what we have lost. I am feeling better, but cannot sleep at nights. ... The Edison Co. made me 2 records of my Darling Mothers old record. The craking sound is heard, but now have that at least to listen to. The record is dated Plymouth England August 18th 1909. Hope alls well regards as ever your bowed down with grief brother H.H." Old fold from mailing; very good.

Much has been made about Houdini's love for his mother. Cecelia Steiner Weiss passed away just over one month before this letter was written, on July 7, 1913, while Houdini was on tour in Europe. When he learned of her passing, he canceled his travel plans and returned to New York.

62. Houdini, Harry. ALS from Houdini to Hardeen regarding the Margery case. March 5, 1925. Houdini writes on hotel stationery, "D.B. [Dear Brother] Dash, File this away for future reference. It speaks for itself. You see Munn took Birds [sic] part & the suprest [suppressed] pages mak[e] a liar out of not only Bird but O.D. Munn & an educated man like Munn feels the hurt of being proven a liar!! Houdini." A marginal note in Houdini's hand states, "I mailed Dr. Free the original today." Old folds, else very good. SIGNED BY HOUDINI.

The men mentioned in Houdini's letter all took part in the controversial test of the spiritualist medium Mina Crandon, known as Margery. Houdini was part of a committee that tested Margery's apparent powers. Scientific American magazine published the committee's findings, and Houdini authored a small booklet exposing Margery's methods.

63. Houdini, Harry. Two-page ALS from Houdini to J.I. Gore. Nov. 3, 1924. On two pages of hotel stationery, Houdini writes with regard to an application for membership in the SAM; about Dr. Wilson and The Sphinx; and signs the letter twice on the second page, once above his home address at 278 W. 113th St., New York. With original mailing cover addressed in Houdini's hand.

64. Houdini, Harry. Houdini lettergram to Clinton Burgess, signed. Dated August 21, 1923, Houdini instructs Burgess to present himself at the Palace Theatre building at Martin Beck's office, in preparation for a performance. Edges a bit ragged, one tiny hole, scrapbook remnants on verso. SIGNED IN PENCIL, "HOUDINI."

Burgess was a noted children's entertainer based in New York and a collector of magic books and ephemera. His notes on the lettergram, written in pencil, tell more of the story: "This in regard to a 'small affair' (which I learned later was a drunken smoker! I did not appear. B. H even suggested I bring my wife. I never entertain at 'smokers.' B."

65

65. Houdini, Harry. Telegram from Houdini to Hardeen. August 29, 1913. Houdini's deeply personal message reads, "Imperator sails as advertised...trust that future will be brightened and our past guided through to happiness by the memory of the unselfish love the mother who bore us willing[y] gave to her last moment on earth. Best wishes and love from [your] brother Houdini." Corners torn away, old folds.

MORRITT'S SECRETS – DRAWN BY HOUDINI

66. Houdini, Harry. Houdini's holographic notes and sketches regarding Morritt's Black and White illusion. Together with Houdini's notes on Morritt's Spirit Table routine. Four 8vo pages, handwritten on the versos of membership blanks to The Magicians' Club of London, of which Houdini served as president.

Houdini details the construction and working of this large and clever illusion requiring a special arrangement of double glass and calico fabric, which were used in combination to conceal assistants who were later produced from the cabinet. The first and third pages show what are perhaps the only detailed diagrams of an illusion in Houdini's hand to be made available for public sale. Hardeen would later write of the Black and White Illusion that it was "the most startling of small cabinet productions."

The fourth page, dated Sunday March 29, 1914, tersely describes Morritt's spirit table routine, called here by Houdini, "A great big laughing hit." Houdini describes the two gimmicks that make the trick work and also writes out directions for the routine: "Com[mittee] place[s] hands on table & slowly? Rises. Then makes er[r]atic jumps! This gets laughs."

67. Houdini, Harry. Witchcraft. An unpublished manuscript by Houdini. [New York?], 1926. Detailed and important typescript with a profusion of holographic corrections and additions in Houdini's hand throughout. The subject covered is, broadly stated, witchcraft. Houdini examines the entire subject, and gives a thumbnail sketch of its history, drawing and quoting heavily from published sources. More specifically, near the end of the manuscript Houdini writes in detail about the Witch of Endor, a medium in ancient times who was reportedly able to summon the spirit of Samuel at the command of King Saul of the Kingdom of Israel. In much the same way Houdini crusaded against spiritualists in his 1924 book A Magician Among the Spirits (several subjects from which appear in passing in these pages), so does this manuscript demonstrate his unwavering crusade against pillars of the spiritualist faith, which so often used Bible stories as support for its cause.

A total of 62 numbered pages on 4to sheets, typed on rectos only, some significantly larger after cutting-and-pasting. The professional tone suggests a guiding editorial hand, while the hundreds of corrections in Houdini's hand show his tendency toward misspellings and awkward phrases. Some corrections are in pencil or red pencil. A copy of an unsigned letter regarding Houdini's work on the manuscript, dated July 16, 1926, is included, and shows that this was one of the last publishing projects he was working on before his death. Accompanied by a letter of provenance tracing the ownership of the manuscript.

68. Houdini, Harry. A Magician Among the Spirits original manuscript. Likely a second or third draft of Houdini's last book exposing and explaining the history of modern spiritualism and the methods used to defraud the public by an array of underhanded individuals who claimed an ability to communicate with the dead. Included here are original typescripts and carbons of over half of the book, including the following chapters: "Introduction" and a synopsis, "The Fox Sisters," "The Davenport Brothers," "Odelia Diss Debarr," "Palladino," "Slate Writing," "Spirit Photography," "Ectoplasm," "Investigations - Wise & Otherwise," and "Exposé of Methods."

Many chapters include a one- or two-page summary. Hundreds of handmade corrections in pencil and ink are scattered throughout, and include considerable underlining, strike-throughs of entire paragraphs, and corrections. Dozens of pasted-in additions, mostly in the form of footnotes, have been added to the original 4to pages. Some corrections likely in the hand of Houdini himself, though the bulk of the holographic notes are most likely in the hand of Oscar Teale, a well-known magician and author in his own right, and Houdini's secretary and aide in investigating the spiritualists and their methods.

A Magician Among the Spirits was published in 1924. However, based on a comparison of the text in these pages, the manuscript more closely reflects a revised edition Houdini was preparing at the time of his death, as the prose more closely matches a working manuscript of that edition published posthumously, in 1996 (see lot 20). The text here is strikingly similar, but not identical to that manuscript.

Hundreds of pages in all, typed on rectos only, some with plain manuscript wrappers and bound at tops of sheets, wrappers hand lettered with title names, other chapters loose.

69. Houdini Family Scrapbook. Assembled by Houdini's niece, Marie Blood, and containing approximately 19 original contemporary photographs, the majority featuring Houdini and his wife Beatrice in a variety of poses and situations. Two images show Houdini performing the Water Torture Cell, while other stills from his films depict him in cuffs or chains. Still others are famous portraits of Houdini, Bess, or the couple together. Later pictures, several shot by Irving Desfor, show Bess and Edward Saint, and scenes at the Houdini family plot in Macpelah Cemetary with magicians and family members paying tribute to the great magician. A variety of newspaper clippings related to Houdini, from the 1950s - 90s are also incorporated into the scrapbook. Folio. Disbound, with most images loose on pages or mounted with photo corners. A clipping, likely from a Houdini movie brochure, has been mounted to the front cover of the scrapbook.

70. Houdini Spirit Photography Scrapbook. Unbound collection of newspaper and magazine clippings related to spirit and fairy photographs - purportedly genuine ghosts and fairies - kept by Houdini. Articles primarily extracted from British publications of the 1920s, including John Bull, The Star, London Daily News, Westminster Gazette, and several New York newspapers. Many reproduce supposed and "real" spirit photographs. Nineteen pages, clippings laid down on both sides. One page with clipped corners, else very good. Owned by Harry Houdini, and BEARING HIS SIGNATURE TWICE IN THE MARGINS, AS WELL AS MARGINAL NOTES AND HIS INITIALS IN PENCIL.

LOST HOUDINI SCRAPBOOK

71. Important Houdini spiritualism scrapbook. Being a large scrapbook kept and used by Houdini in his last years, during an era in which his crusades against fraudulent spirit mediums were at their zenith. The contents include hundreds upon hundreds of clippings from American, British, and foreign newspapers and magazines, and discuss the exploits of famous and infamous spiritualists, including the famous Boston medium Margery. In addition to the clippings, a scattering of handbills and ephemeral printed matter (including two TLSs to Houdini, one with his marginal notes) related to spiritualism or specific spiritualist meetings or séances, and several feature-length clippings discussing various aspects of Houdini's life and career.

Dozens if not hundreds of Houdini's handwritten notations fill the margins or serve to date and identify the clippings, even though many of the articles were clearly supplied by a clipping service. In specific instances, he comments about the articles in the margins ("Proves Munn is [indecipherable] & against me! [signed] Houdini" "This is minister who lied about Margery" "End of the Los A[ngeles] affair started by C. Sloan," and more). On one page, Houdini writes the phrase "Methods of gaining information" twice, a possible allusion to a chapter in A Magician Among the Spirits regarding the methods used by fraudulent mediums to obtain apparently secret information from their sitters.

Several clippings in the book are not related to spiritualism specifically, but are related to magic and allied subjects, including Floyd Thayer, trick photography, Eugene Dennis, crystal gazing, fortune telling and rival magician Howard Thurston. One clipping is inscribed and signed by the famous psychic researcher Harry Price.

This heretofore unknown scrapbook was discovered in 2013 in California. A typed label on the leather cover reads "Important Scrapbook/Miscellaneous Clippings". The contents fill 125 folio-size pages nearly to overflowing. Some clippings with ragged edges or old tears, a few pages now loose from metal three-ring binding, but contents in very good condition overall. Several larger pieces laid in at rear. Leather covers fragile but intact, original leather backstrip possibly lacking.

72. Morritt, Charles. Three telegrams from Charles Morritt to Houdini. February - June, 1914. Morritt's brief messages include this tantalizing if cryptic remark: "Houdini - Palace Theatre Oldham - Forgot to enclose letter re: Donkey sending same. Morritt." Each considerably worn, torn and chipped.

Morritt was a successful performer with a checkered career, but a creative genius. He designed several illusions Houdini used in his full-evening magic show, as well as tricks performed at the famed Egyptian and St. George's Halls in London.

73. Rullman, Leo. Typed letter from Leo Rullman to Houdini regarding Houdini's library. New York, Jan. 6, 1918. Rullman writes, "I am writing to confirm the verbal agreement reached by us...regarding the disposition of your surplus stock of books - that is, Duplicates. ...It is further my understanding that you will assist the sale of these books by the insertion of autographs and other embellishments as will make them more valuable from a collector's view point." An original carbon response by Houdini, unsigned, is attached at the rear, in which he agrees to Rullman's proposal. The latter torn cleanly through upper third, the former with closed tears at old folds and one handmade correction by Rullman.

150/250

74. [Spiritualism Scrapbook - Houdini] Spiritualism scrapbook with anti-Houdini content. Compiled ca. 1926, and including dozens of newspaper clippings related to Houdini's spiritualism exposés, a series of exposé stories by Henry G. Hart, and other subjects. Over thirty pages are devoted to a handwritten lecture on spiritualism, apparent spirit messages, as well as other notes on the work of "Norma," an unknown medium (including lists of various spirit guides, a "master medium" named Mr. Carthuber, trumpet séances, etc.). One page features a cartoonish portrait of Houdini surrounded by the following text: "Houdini the Jew. Faker. Fraud. Bum. Biggest money getter under false pretenses alive. Does not believe in himself." Roughly 4to, pages loose in binding, good condition overall.

THE HOUDINI-BARD COLLECTION

The artifacts described here came from an unlikely friendship begun in 1955, when a 10-year-old boy magician, James Baldauf, met Houdini's old friend, Mr. James Bard (1871 – 1958), then in his mid 80s. During summer visits to Texas, Bard shared with the young magician stories, scrapbooks, and rare memorabilia related to his and Houdini's careers. Bard and Houdini started their show business careers together touring with the Welsh Bros. Circus in 1896, and remained close friends throughout their lives. Bard went on to a successful career as an acrobat and slack-wire artist, while Houdini climbed to the top of the show business ladder as the world's best-known magician. Their relationship is documented in The Secret Life of Houdini by William Kalush and Larry Sloman. Two of the objects offered here were exhibited at the Houston Museum of Science in 2004. Each item is accompanied by a letter of provenance from James Baldauf, to whom these items were given by Bard over six decades ago.

75. Bard, James. Group of James Bard memorabilia. Including two postcards, ALSs by Bard (one on pictorial letterhead), newspaper clippings, and the cover of The Police Gazette featuring the Bards on the cover. 1900s – 50s. Condition varies from fair to very good.

76. Bard, James. The Marvellous Bard Phenomenal Trick Swinging Wire Artist. Birmingham, Moody Bros., ca. 1910. Half-sheet (18 x 28") color lithographed poster depicting the acrobatic feats of James Bard and a small dog, balancing on wires and ladders. Losses, damage and scratches; framed and not examined out of frame.

400/600

A newspaper clipping of James Bard holding the poster is included.

77. Houdini, Beatrice. Beatrice Houdini's embroidered tailcoat. Handsome embroidered tailcoat embellished with beadwork, lined with silk. Worn by Beatrice Houdini and later given to Katie Bard by Mrs. Houdini. Beaded trim at cuffs, collar, and along the entire exterior. 38" high. Many seams weak or separated and in need of repair, but overall condition is stable. Perhaps the only costume worn by Beatrice or Harry Houdini ever offered for public sale. Accompanied by a letter of provenance.

7,000/9,000

On March 22, 1956, James Bard wrote to James Baldauf, "I have a bust of Houdini and a stage coat Mrs. Houdini used in the act, that I will sell. I am asking $10.00 for the two pieces, if you are interested let me know as I have an offer from a(?) fellow in R[ead]ing[ing]." In a second letter dated March 29, 1957, James Bard writes, "I am sending under separate cover...Bust and dress, hope it arrived O.K. My wife received dress from Mrs. Houdini some 30 years ago[.] Bust Houdini sent me some time before this. The dress is original Mrs. Houdini used in Houdini act in Europe."

78. Houdini, Harry. Plaster Bust of Harry Houdini. England, ca. 1902. Handsome sculpture picturing Houdini's bust atop a plinth, with a red female devil whispering in his ear. Text below Houdini's head inside a laurel wreath, from which hangs an open set of handcuffs, reads, "The Original Handcuff King." Houdini's name has been cast into the base near the bottom. 12 3/4" high. The base of the sculpture is signed by the artist, "B. Hermly [?], 135 West 10 N.Y." Scratched and worn, nose repaired, but good condition overall. One of two known examples.

6,000/8,000

John Mulholland, writing in The Sphinx Vol. 50, No. 6 (Dec. 1951), dedicated a full page to what he dubbed "Mementos of the Masters." In describing the Houdini bust, he commented that it "...is one he had made on his first trip to England to advertise his handcuff act. Very few copies were cast."

79. Houdinis, The. Real photo portrait postcard of Mr. & Mrs. Houdini. 1909. Full-length image of Houdini and Bess, the latter sitting in a carved chair. Divided back with pre-printed Christmas and New Year greetings, addressed in Houdini's hand to the Bards "Mr. & Mrs. Bard 352 Pear St., Reading PA U.S of America." Wear from mounting on verso, one corner bumped.

80. Wood, William. William B. Wood pictorial broadside. Port-of-Spain, Daily New Job Printing Office, 1897. One-color pictorial broadside (10 x 25") advertising Wood & Edna's final performance in Trinidad, and picturing a levitation scene. Other acts including juggling, ventriloquism, and The Bard Bros. billed as "The Great Triple Horizontal Bar Act." Stained, chipped, small losses; framed, and not examined out of frame.

200/300

Marginal notes appear in two places on the broadside, indicating the location of the performance and the Bard's position on the bill. William B. Wood, a contemporary of Harry Kellar, met an untimely death at sea in the Gulf of Mexico. A copy of a letter in Bard's hand describes in further detail his tour with Wood and other personal details about the magician.

EPHEMERA & PHOTOGRAPHS

81. Hardeen (Theodore Weiss). 16mm film of Hardeen's overboard packing box escape. Short silent film of Hardeen escaping from a wooden crate after he has been nailed inside and the box has been sunken under water. Likely a later print. With a digital transfer of the original, on DVD. Originally in the collection of Dr. Morris N. Young.

300/400

82. Hardeen (Theodore Weiss). Photograph of Hardeen and Edward Saint. New York [?], ca. 1940. Half-length photograph of the two men arguably most responsible for the growth of Houdini's fame after his death. 7 x 5". Corners bumped.

50/150
